Who is Diane Simon Smith, MFT?

Diane Smith brings unique personal and professional experience to her work with families of children with special needs. She holds a Masters degree in Public Health and as a Marriage and Family Therapist. As a licensed Marriage and Family therapist, she works with families as they struggle with issues of loss and rebuilding new meaning while raising a child with disabilities. She leads parents and sibling groups, retreats for parents, and is a frequent presenter at workshops on families with disabilities. She has been on the faculty of Philips Graduate Institute. Her two children with special needs, one of whom has Fragile X Syndrome, have been her greatest teachers.
